McGlinchey Stafford is pleased to bring you the Manufactured Housing Law Update, prepared by the firm's nationally recognized consumer financial services team. For decades, McGlinchey Stafford has been a leader in the manufactured housing and mortgage lending industries, representing clients in the areas of federal and state law compliance, preemption analysis and advice, nationwide document preparation, licensing support, due diligence, federal and state examination and enforcement action defense, individual and class action litigation defense, and white collar criminal defense.

The Manufactured Housing Law Update is presented to assist and inform manufactured home lenders, manufactured home dealers, and manufactured home community owners with news related to chattel lending and loan servicing, perfecting security interests in manufactured homes, manufactured housing installation standards, and more.

Topics covered in the August issue include case developments regarding the valuation of manufactured homes in bankruptcy, emergency rules regarding manufactured housing licensing in Oklahoma, Illinois' Mobile Home Landlord and Tenant Rights Act, and Maryland's wet venting rules.

Other developments include amendments to Mississippi's installation rules as well as licensing provisions.
